

Building Effective Multi-Stakeholder Research Teams

Further Reading:

Defining Roles and Responsibilities

▶ Twelve Lessons Learned for Effective Research Partnerships Between Patients, Caregivers, Clinicians, Academic Researchers, and Other Stakeholders

Authors: Holly O. Witteman, Selma C. Dansokho, Heather Colquhoun, et. al.

Source: Pub Med, National Library of Medicine, April 2018

Length: 5 pages

This article provides advice on establishing a culture of respect, actively involving team members, and facilitating effective communication on multi-stakeholder research teams.

Link

▶ Identifying Research Partnership Roles

Author: Institute for Patient- and Family-Centered Care (IPFCC)

Source: IPFCC Preparing for Research Partnerships Web Series, February 20, 2020

Length: 1 page

Describes the roles and responsibilities of patient and family advisors, staff liaisons, and researchers on multi-stakeholder research teams.

Link

▶ Partnership Research: A Pathway to Realize Multistakeholder Participation

Authors: Wilmer Numans, Tine Van Regenmortel, Rene Schalk

Source: International Journal of Qualitative Methods, October 2019

Length: 12 pages

This article presents a comprehensive view of stakeholders as research partners and the larger roles stakeholders can play in a research project. The article raises three key issues to address as stakeholders take on roles and responsibilities.

Link

